A prestigious real estate endeavor is set to grace
Vilamoura's landscape.

Located in Quinta do Morgadinho within Vilamoura, nestled in Loulé's municipality, a Portuguese fund management firm has earmarked this locale for a grand real estate venture worth €700m euros, as per the developer's announcement.

Spanning 68 hectares in the scenic Algarve region, the project dubbed Arcaya Homes will debut with an initial phase boasting 48 'premium' villas. These residences, crafted with a keen eye on environmental sustainability, will debut on the market with prices commencing at €1.9m euros, states the promoter.

The inaugural phase will witness the construction of 48 villas, each spanning 240m² and situated on plots ranging from 1,000m² to 2,000m². The completion timeline is estimated at 12 months.

Nestled within a 68-hectare forest, Arcaya Homes, envisioned by Battleiroig, a Spanish architectural firm, will be erected using avant-garde methods centered on ecosystem preservation. Featuring wooden structures and off-site construction, the project aims for minimal ecological impact throughout its development, promising future inhabitants an unparalleled fusion of comfort and nature immersion.

Frederico Pedro Nunes, the funds operations director, hailed the project as a paradigm shift in sustainability and architecture, lauding its pioneering approach that sets new standards for environmental responsibility in real estate and construction.

The residential offerings encompass three distinct styles – Terracotta, Timber, and Sand – comprising two-story homes with up to four bedrooms, outdoor spaces, gardens, terraces, private pools, and ample living and dining areas.

Moreover, plans include the establishment of a club, restaurants, and a wellness center, ensuring residents access to a plethora of essential amenities including grocery stores and laundry services.

"Residing in Arcaya will emulate dwelling within a natural haven in the heart of the Algarve, where sustainable dwellings seamlessly merge with an endless garden, offering every necessity at our doorstep," expressed Frederico Pedro Nunes.

You can rest assured that OliveHomes.com will keep you up to date of the progress of this amazing development in the months to come!
